

Rehabilitation for pets

Medical aids by professionals not amateurs

Determine what device you need

Splints, harnesses, wheelchairs, wheel carts are medical aids. This is not a toy, or entertainment. Choose wisely.

Remember you are your pets voice and protector. Medical problems and conditions are the most heartbreaking. They cannot speak and will often mask pain so you only know when a condition is quite advanced. Don't let them suffer with imitation or cheap products. If you were to break a leg or need a sling for your arm, do you consult a professional produced line of products or rely on a do Google "who is making arm slings in their garage?"

CONSULT YOUR VET

Diagnosis is not a guessing game, and not for the untrained.

IDENTIFY THE CONDITION

Is it a rupture, a break, a fracture?

CHOOSE THE AID

Hind limb, forelimb, back or hip support choose the aid suitable for their condition

Measure your pet

It is important to choose a device based on measurements-to make it comfortable for your patient.

Donate an aid

Shelters, NGO's need quality products for their patients. The sooner a patient heals, the sooner the next one is helped!

Is your pet/ patient growing

Is the patient growing, discuss with your vet how that will impact the use of an aid.

No you don't. You buy professionally made products. The same principles apply to veterinary products. Quality veterinary products save you money over time and heal your pets and patients faster.

Why professional over amateur

We encourage every amateur to work at finding the next best solution

In the mean time, stick to the professionally crafted and created. Better health care leads to better health. That is true of any patient. We firmly believe patients must have access to the best care affordable. If you can afford the best for your pets, extend a helping hand to your local shelter.

“Love and intention do not heal. Preparation, care & concrete action heal.”

If you work with injured or recovering animals you know how beneficial the reduction of pain is to a healing process. Mental strength is aided by physical strength and recovery is quicker.

“Animals often hide pain. Be vigilant & get them help in time”

ABOUT OUR JOURNEY

We worked for decades with make shift and locally sourced products. There was a time when a towel sling was for a paralysed cat or dog was all we knew. But as we learn, we grow. And we strive for better things, not in value of money, but in value of its contribution to the betterment of a cause.

Your cause is the betterment of your pet or animals health. You care about your pets, or an animal in a shelter. The core idea behind quality veterinary aids is the same as using a walking stick for an elderly patient -you'd never choose one which is likely to break after a month of use. Because we would never knowingly use an inferior product for a member of our family.
